Hello,

Jim Mott here.

I have made my webpage public in preparation for today's Webinar:

http://contentbuilder.merlot.org/toolkit/html/snapshot.php?id=16159...

I would like my webpage to be both things, if possible:

1) an online professional portfolio;

2) a resource for my students and their parents;

Can we restrict access to some portions of the website by password? Or is this better done by having two separate MERLOT web page hierarchies?

Best regards,

Jim

Hi Jim,

I like the approach you took in developing your website. It seems that you would rather have all your information right up front which is one way of making it interesting. Your content also fits on one page when your welcome page (main page) opens in a browser, which is a typical standard rule for web developers when creating the welcome or main page of a website. Today, you will add navigation bars for the materials which parents and students can access. You can keep materials on the server for you own private use, and you can create materials that you will make public for parents and students.

We will show you how this all works today.

Will this be a place we can send a message to you if we need help over the next couple of weeks and in between workshops?

Hi Terri,

Your first page looks really great!! I enjoyed reading your teaching philosophy. Wow! it was very touching and inspiring.

Unfortunately, I was not able to open your resume. It was set up as a compressed file. I am wondering if the format (version of word) is any different than your teaching philosophy. You might want to check this and see if it is the same type of format - that is if you used word to create the file. Let me know if you need help on this.

I will work with the administrators of program and see if we can fix the document type so that we have more flexibility.
